TWENTY FOUR YEARS OF CREATING EXPERIENCES!
Comparing Homecomings

By Alexa D. Hodges

Missouri’s original Homecoming was held in 1911 and was among the first. The Vandals’ Homecoming is said to have taken place in 1909.

Both Mizzou and Idaho have a week of engaging, philanthropic events that aim to bolster school spirit and provide service to the community in the lead up to the big game, some of which have lasted for decades.

Events shared by both include a parade, blood drive, royalty, talent show and campus decorations among others.

The night before a Homecoming game at Idaho, the “serpentine” is held, much like a conga line. It “snakes across campus, picking up people on the way to the bonfire and pre-game pep rally led by the Sound of Idaho Marching Band and the University president,” according to the University of Idaho Vandal website.

Kathy Barnard, assistant vice president of alumni relations and advancement communications, is a 1981 Idaho alumna who says she has attended dozens of Vandal homecomings. “It’s a big deal for us primarily because a lot of our alumni do consider it the time to come home, and there are thousands of people flocking to Moscow.”

The tradition of mum corsages returns

By Missourian staff news@columbiamissourian.com

Last fall, Tia Odom championed the restoration of gold mum corsages for wear at the Homecoming football game. It was a Mizzou tradition especially popular in the 1950s and '60s. So this year, the mum corsages are back.

The huge gold mums with a black ribbon became a staple accessory when Tigers dressed up for Saturday football games. The tradition waned in the 1970s, and recently, they were worn only by Homecoming dignitaries.

A 1999 graduate of Mizzou's College of Education, Odom didn't wear Homecoming mums as a student but said she wished she had.

"The mums look so classic," she has said. "Mizzou Homecoming is classic. It's the original."

Each mum corsage costs $15 and can be preordered online at www.mizzou.com/hocomums.

Mums must be picked up between 10 a.m. and 9 p.m. on Oct. 20. No mums will be available for pick up on Saturday.

The pickup location will be provided in a confirmation email.

"The mums look so classic. Mizzou Homecoming is classic. It's the original."

A day in the life of a tri-director
These three students have spent months planning for MU’s biggest tradition

By Shauna Reanne Yates
news@columbiamissourian.com

Leading the 36 members of the Homecoming Steering Committee and working together as a smaller team, these three dedicated students have assumed the role of putting on MU’s beloved fall tradition: Homecoming.

BROOKE NOVINGER
Year: Senior
Major: Biochemistry
Hometown: Kirksville

COLE EDWARDS
Year: Senior
Major: Agricultural economics
Hometown: Salisbury

BAYLEE FRANCKA
Year: Senior
Major: Psychology
Hometown: Jefferson City

Baylee Francka, Cole Edwards, and Brooke Novinger are the 2017 Homecoming tri-directors. Their planning for Homecoming began months ago.

Q What prompted you to apply to be a tri-director and continue a leadership role?

A Novinger: I’ve always had a love for Homecoming and being a part of the steering committee made me fall in love with it even more. People really looked up to the tri-directors last year and they inspired me to be that role model for our group. Homecoming has given me some of my best memories at Mizzou, and if there was anything I could do to prolong that experience, I wanted to take it.

Edwards: I’ve always been an involved person, and once you get involved in Homecoming, it’s just one of those things you can’t stop. You’re addicted.

Francka: It’s really hard to go back once you see Homecoming from this side. You get way more out of it than what you get in. The overwhelming passion doesn’t just go away when October ends.

Q How do you think your past positions have helped you prepare for being a tri-director?

A Novinger: It helps a lot because you have a familiarity with the process, you’re basically an expert in your area. You use your resources to reach out to the other people and bounce ideas off of them, but you have that base knowledge so you can hit the ground running when this process starts early in the spring semester.

A Francka: This job is a team effort. One of the biggest parts of our job is recruiting a competent committee. It happens before many others are even thinking about Homecoming, but being able to rely on them to get the job done is crucial. We have a rock star group this year, which makes the experience more relaxed and enjoyable for everyone.

Q What are you hoping to accomplish this year going forward?

A Novinger: Last year was the first year with different levels of involvement. We want to keep improving on that and increasing involvement so any organization can compete. I had not had much of a chance to be involved with Homecoming prior to serving on the steering committee, so I want to ensure that students in similar situations were able to partake in this incredible tradition.

Edwards: There are four different levels of activities designed to best fit the needs of the organizations. With 75 percent of the student population not involved in the Greek community, it is important to provide them an outlet to participate. We want to make it Mizzou’s most cherished tradition for all students.

Q: What does this job entail?

A: Novinger: We want to be able to stay on the same track and always be in constant communication. We’re working to expand Homecoming to all of campus and to make it accessible to the whole community.

Edwards: We facilitate the whole process and oversee certain committees, making sure that we’re all working together and cohesively pooling our talents.

Francka: Being flexible and having that line of communication is key. We are here to help keep our steering committee’s morale up, make sure they are kept up-to-date and help them use their skills to make it the best Homecoming yet.

Q: How has this Mizzou tradition impacted you?

A: Novinger: I’ve been coming to Homecoming since I was in diapers. The magic started early for me, but I didn’t experience it like this until I joined steering committee last year. It’s given me lifelong friends and memories that have shaped me into a stronger version of myself.

Edwards: Homecoming is the essence of Mizzou. Mizzou has always been more than a university; it’s home, a state of mind and the catalyst for success. We get to celebrate all of this each October, when we celebrate the tradition we gave the world. It links me to others in my family, my friends and the extensive alumni network we have around the globe. It’s a tradition like no other that truly brings everyone in the Mizzou family home.

Francka: Both my parents went here, so we grew up with Mizzou instilled in our blood. But being here myself has allowed me to create my own experiences and love it in a different way. Homecoming shows off so many incredible people, organizations, and activities that make up Mizzou, and getting everyone back on campus creates a vibrant buzz of energy that just makes you smile. We love it and want to show everyone why they should love it, too.

Meet Idaho: A new foe for Homecoming

By Savannah Walsh
news@columbiamissourian.com

Homecoming is a bit like a wedding with an arranged marriage. It’s a grand tradition that includes numerous festivities and formalities culminating in an elaborate ceremony. But the players in the matchup haven’t met very often before — the last time was 1963. Welcoming a new team to the MU family might seem challenging at first, but by the time kickoff occurs, the two schools and fans will be more familiar.

Before walking into the stadium, make sure you’re well versed about the history of University of Idaho.

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO

Founded: 1889
Main campus: Moscow, Idaho
Conference: Sun Belt Conference with 12 member teams
Mascot: Joe Vandal
Enrollment: 11,780
Notable alumni: Former governor of Alaska and vice presidential nominee Sarah Palin; “Deep Throat” FBI informant essential to Watergate story William Mark Felt

KEY FACTS

- Was the only university in Idaho until 1963 (also the year MU last played Idaho), when Idaho State University emerged.
- According to the Carnegie Foundation, one of the top five higher research universities in the Pacific Northwest, spending $100 million each year.
- Idaho’s football team plays in the ASUI-Kibbie Activity Center or “Kibbie Dome,” which also holds other athletic programs such as basketball and indoor track & field.
- The university enlists Tradition Keepers within the student body, who by participating in 15 school traditions can earn a silver pin or medallion for 35 tradition points. These traditions include attending Idaho’s homecoming and visiting the campus Administration Building.
- Idaho’s 2017 Homecoming was held Oct. 7 when the team played Louisiana-Lafayette.

WILL TIGERS KEEP STREAK ALIVE?

It’s been more than half a century since Idaho and Missouri met on the field, so it seemed appropriate to glance into each respective team’s history and statistics to see how the two stack up after all these years.

The first time the duo met was in 1958 on Missouri turf, and the Tigers managed to edge out a 14-10 win against the Vandals.

Five years later, for the second and last time until this year, the Tigers would once again defeat Idaho to a 24-0 victory in 1963.

One can only hope the streak continues for Homecoming 2017.

History of MU Homecoming

By Missourian staff
news@columbiamissourian.com

In 1911, Missouri head coach Chester Brewer invited alums to “Come Back Home” for the Tigers’ game against the Kansas Jayhawks, establishing Homecoming at MU.

The tradition grew, but in 1918, Homecoming was canceled due to an influenza outbreak on campus.

During the 1926 Homecoming, the dedication of the new Memorial Tower honored MU soldiers who lost their lives in World War I. That year also marked the first Homecoming game in the larger Memorial Stadium.

Homecoming grew into a community event with the introduction of house decorations for sororities and fraternities in the 1930s.

With the beloved Don Faurot coaching the Tigers, football games attracted some of the largest crowds Memorial Stadium would ever see. In the 1956 Homecoming game, his players carried him off the field after winning his last game as head coach. The playing field at Memorial Stadium was renamed Faurot Field in 1972 to honor his achievements.

Other changes in the 1970s included increased focus on service projects and social change. Parade floats had themes centered on peace efforts. In 1971, Jill Young Menears was elected as the first black Homecoming Queen.

MU’s Homecoming blood drive, first held in 1985, is now one of the largest in the nation.

Opponents have changed over the years as the tradition of alternating with Kansas for Homecoming ended. While in the Big 12 in 2010, Missouri upset Oklahoma for the first time in a decade. Since moving to the Southeastern Conference, Missouri lost a heartbreaker against South Carolina in 2013. For the second year in a row, Missouri plays a non-conference opponent for Homecoming.

Sporting black and gold beanies, freshman in 1911-12 follow commands of sophomores.

In 1982 the Tigers defeated Oklahoma 19-14 for the first time since 1969. After the win, fans tore down the Faurot Field goal post.

Marching Mizzou performs the ‘M’ formation during halftime of the 1948 Homecoming game. The band was formed in 1885 with 12 members who were formerly in the Corps of Cadets.

In 1948, Marching Mizzou performs the 'M' formation during halftime of the Homecoming game at Rollins Field. A record 9,000 fans attended the game, which ended in a tie.
